

Quick Facts:

- Currently, GW Regulatory Studies Fellow with the World Bank Doing Business Unit
- Previously, Research Assistant at the GW Regulatory Studies Center
- Second year MPP student at the GW Trachtenberg School of Public Policy and Public Administration (TSPPPA) with a concentration in regulatory policy

Second-year MPP student and former GW Regulatory Studies Center research assistant Ana Maria Zarate Moreno was recently selected for a highly competitive internship with the World Bank. She is gathering information for the Bank's Doing Business Unit on measures to support its credit information indicator and will assist in preparation of comparative analysis related to credit indicators on a country by country and regional basis.

After excelling in her regulatory analysis coursework, Ana Maria worked with the GW RSC from May through December 2015, providing valuable analysis on domestic and international regulatory issues. She focused on cross-country analysis of regulatory reforms and best practices, examined international approaches to the regulatory process and analyzed data on regulation, innovation and entrepreneurship.

Before starting her graduate studies, Ana Maria worked for 5 years in the Colombian Government contributing actively to a new regulatory policy proposal and to the process of accession of Colombia to the Regulatory Policy Committee of the OECD. Her interests include comparison and adaptation of the best international practices for improving regulatory systems.

Ana Maria is thriving in her intellectually challenging role with the World Bank in part due to her experiences in the Trachtenberg School and the GW Regulatory Studies Center. Ana Maria will graduate from the GW TSPPPA in May of this year and we're looking forward to seeing where her future career in regulatory policy takes her.
